It definitely helps to show how much is going on, which is a lot really, and it certainly teaches me a lot about current issues, and the training I have received through it has been invaluable.	1
yes	Through my research			This would be interesting
Useful to know what's going on around Oxfordshire	1

yes		1		Short info on ONCF org. Links to a website which can inform people regarding climate change, or tip of the week, or similar yes		1		Excellent as it is. Entries are brief and factual. Some pointers in the bulletin to new additions or more detailed or illustrated material on the ONCF website might help. Keep up the excellent work!

I scan through the bulletin every week, to keep abreast of what's going on in nature conservation in Oxon.	1			An annual list of grant schemes relevant to nature conservation, community projects, access projects etc, briefly giving details of the kind of projects funded by each grant scheme, might be useful – but not on a weekly basis.
Yes, it is useful to find out what is going on locally, get ideas and information and participate in surveys, campaigns etc.			1	Maybe you could do “specials” from time to time, where a local group gets to talk about who they are and what they do.

				I originally subscribed to ONCF newsletter for information in my job as events and talks co-ordinator, but also have a personal interest in the environment and things happening round and about the local countryside. It's a very good, well rounded and informative service and am pleased to have access to such information.
yes		Am aware but reside outside Oxon.		Would be interested in projects undertaken by local groups particularly those aimed at increasing community involvement.

helps?	BAP involved	BAP aware	BAP not aw	other items	comment
Not applicable in its current state. It is really only a resource of links to other orgs etc. In itself it does not inform.	1			A real problem within the environmental industry is getting work and especially employing skilled workers. People who can offer voluntary surveys/training to fit in with full time employment would be a great asset.
yes		1		Same items as outlined above
I pass on information to The Sprout, free community newsletter for North Hinksey and businesses 10 p.a. reaching 4,500 readers			1	Perhaps limit the full length narratives of some working groups/ Gyms after some weeks to just a contact number. This would save the length – but may be counter productive?
I find it invaluable as a means of keeping in touch with the multitude of environmental activities in Oxfordshire. I often recommend it to friends and contacts, or forward bits of information to interested parties.			1	It would be helpful if the contents could be further subdivided into (for example) local, regional, and national issues; funding opportunities; training for volunteers, etc.

I read it front to back to see what is going on in the environmental community and also to see what the latest thinking is on environmental issues especially interested in conservation issues.		1		Brief description of projects would be good. We do volunteer work at Chimney and it would be of interest to see what projects are happening at other reserves in the region.
yes			1	Do you ever add listings from the Upper Thames Branch of Butterfly Conservation? I got involved in the early stages, just because I was interested. After a while I dropped out because I felt I was just 'audience fodder' and that other people (quite rightly those with professional or other pressing interests) were leading with their aims, objectives and desire to present their views. These people needed the reassurance provided by a significant number of receptive ears. There was no easy route in towards a practical or effective role for a educated, part-time, volunteer at this early stage (Oxford Botany degree, years of teaching experience, currently school biology textbook writer , illustrator and packager). Since then, I have felt pretty wary of attempting to get involved.			1	I remain interested, albeit looking in from the outside, so, such material would be of great interest. Who knows, it might just get me involved again.

it's a really useful digest of the local perspective and also linking and highlighting national/international issues	1			Maybe a 'pre warning' of seasonal and cyclical issues based on observations by members – e.g. bluebells/snowdrops etc are expected in next few weeks and here are the best places to view ? The bulletin is fantastic – and I hope that it keeps going
To me its more of a useful summary of what events are coming up more than opinion forming	1			Seems to work well as is as weekly update of latest news and events and as such does its job. Keeping it simple is as good a way as any to continue. Other things could be best made available through other mechanisms / means.

The bulletin prompted me to find out more about the local CAGs.			1	I already find the bulletin very informative and while I am mostly interested in events that will encourage my children's interest in wildlife and the countryside I do read the whole newsletter and I always point people towards the ONCF website if they are looking for events to attend or volunteering opportunities. The times and dates of working groups/green gyms are very useful and not easy to find elsewhere. I work in adult education with ex-homeless people and occasionally students want to volunteer or get involved in outdoor work but whilst I've given them the information I can't say definitely that anyone has volunteered.

I already work for a wildlife trust but I find it heartening that there are lots of other groups carrying out complementary work to ours.	1			The good thing about the bulletin is that it is easy to read and to use. I wouldn't want to see it turn into just another newsletter that is cluttered up with text.
Not really			1	The planners (in oxford) show such little regard for anything except the 'desires' of developers – have got the stage that don't really see what difference anything 'worthy' but which provides no tangible financial gain to the council can achieve. I think ONCF is happily complacent – and with an enemy like ONCF the planners will be jumping for joy!

Definitely			1	thank you for the hard work. I think it might be a good idea to indicate age groups on all such events which you timetable. My work is mainly focussed overseas, the bulletin keeps me in touch with local concern, issues and activities.		aware but not involved		yes, project outlines would be interesting. Yes, very much so. Plus it's great to hear what events are going on that I can get involved in locally – especially regarding climate change.			y	Yes this would be very useful as I am not really aware of ONCF's activities and it would be great to find out how we can help you in return for the great service provided by the bulletin.
Not directly, but it acts as a good networking device and lets one know about local events and organisations that are working in the conservation, environment sphere.	1			Maybe a section dedicated to funding projects. Ie. A list of where to find funds and how to get them; also contacts for people who have managed to secure funding and are willing to give others advice on how to go about it. It might be nice to have a chat-room type area, where people can talk to each other and get advice, learn about new and old projects, ask conservation related questions, post images, etc. A bit like the BMERC site.
